Flood geology (also creation geology or diluvial geology) is the attempt to interpret and reconcile geological features of the Earth in accordance with a literal belief in the global flood described in Genesis 6-8. In the early 19th century, diluvial geologists hypothesized that specific surface features were evidence of a worldwide flood which had followed earlier geological eras; after ...

A cut bank, also known as a river cliff or river-cut cliff, is the outside bank of a water channel (), which is continually undergoing erosion. Cut banks are found in abundance along mature or meandering streams, they are located on the outside of a stream bend, known as a meander, opposite the slip-off slope on the inside of the bend. They are shaped much like a small cliff, and are formed by ...

Until the 18th century no distinction was made between potassium and sodium. This was because early chemists did not recognise that "mineral alkali" (Na_2CO_3 , sodium carbonate, coming from deposits in the earth) and "vegetable alkali" (K_2CO_3 , potassium carbonate, derived from wood ashes) are distinct from each other. Eventually a distinction was made.
