Introduction to Convolution The 'Convolve' and the closely related 'Correlate' methods, are in many ways very similar to Morphology. In fact they work in almost the exactly the same way, matching up a neighbourhood 'kernel' at each location, making them a just another special 'method' of morphology.

The N needs to be changed to the ID of the table in question (or use .tablepress as the first part of the selector, if you want this to apply to all TablePress tables on your site—which is normally discouraged, to not lose flexibility).. This is the general pattern that I recommend. You can use this as often as needed, changing the column in question to the correct number each time.
