When I did the Kings Scholarship for Eton, the papers had gotten a lot harder than in past years. There are two General papers which can have absolutely anything in them- mine had quantum physics for a start! English papers are always very hard and the two maths papers can be terrifying, though the second Maths B paper is much harder.

Some of the unusual language used at Eton is quite fun, too. One of the Eton games of football, the Field Game, contributed to the inclusion of the off-side rule in Association Football, if I understand correctly. In the Field Game you can be offside laterally as well as longitudinally. Being longitudinally offside is called 'firking'.
